High-tech insights at The Safety Show Sydney

Attention to safety is as important in food service as it is in any industry where people are required to manufacture and serve at fast pace.

There are dangers in using knives, working with hot oil and hot plates, operating equipment and sometimes walking on wet or greasy floors.

Then there's the question of hygiene where people handle food with their hands and have to ensure receptacles and food are free from contamination.

The Safety Show Sydney running from 25-27 October, will provide the food service industry with a golden opportunity to check out new technology and systems to improve safety in the workplace.

To be held at the Sydney Showground, Sydney Olympic Park, this event will feature hundreds of products and services, from cleaning products to framed safety posters.

Non toxic cleaner

In the food industry, new cleaning products are not only proving more effective but also environmentally safe.

For example, CIPL will be showcasing Simple Crystal Green, a non-toxic, non-hazardous readily biodegradable and rinse-residue free general purpose concentrated cleaner and degreaser.

It is ideal for food processing and handling equipment using a technology called micro particulate fractionalization.

Another from CIPL is Drainbo drain cleaner, similarly environmentally safe, that will penetrate and digest waste such as grease, soap film, oil, proteins, fats and detergents.

Hand Hygiene

Deb Australia is to showcase a 'global range' of hand hygiene products for the workplace that builds on 70 years' experience with food and other commercial and industrial sectors.

The firm's declared product development philosophy is to design products that are innovative, fit for purpose and pleasant, easy to use, cost effective and tested to the highest internationally recognised protocols.

Posters for safety

Visitors to the Poster Factory Australia stand will find a unique service, in which posters are supplied and maintained through a dynamic poster exchange system. The posters, catalogued in an extensive library, cover a broad range of issues relating to health, safety and the environment.

Special front-loading, anodized frames are positioned strategically across an organisation's site. Once the frames are installed the posters are changed every six weeks and charged for on an annual fee basis. A free design and print service prepares messages to theme specifications.

First Aid

Then there's the question of first aid. No workplace should be without a first aid kit, and one of the best examples will be shown at the Survival Emergency Solutions stand.

Survival Emergency Solutions, which has sold two million copies of the Emergency First Aid Handbook, will be exhibiting its new 'Handy' First Aid Kit and a new 'Workplace' First Aid Kit. Visitors should also ask about the free First Aid iPhone application.

The abovementioned products and services are just a sample of what will be seen at The Safety Show Sydney. Others include health and safety management software; risk management tools; security and communication equipment; health and safety consultants; insurance products; medical and rehabilitation services; ergonomics and office safety; vehicle safety; hygiene services and equipment; and legislation advisory organisations.

Larger food service organisations will be interested in Sydney Materials Handling and Bulkex, which will be held concurrently and co-located with The Safety Show Sydney.
